

Did you know that this year is the first on record that two Category 5 Atlantic hurricanes made landfall in the same year? And only two weeks apart!

That's not all: this year the ice cover in the Arctic Ocean has shattered the all-time low record, and summer is not over: it could decline even further before the winter comes.

And hear this: after all the scorching, record-breaking heat this year, the Old Farmer's Almanac says next year will be the warmest year in at least a century!

So what's your point... that we should cut and run?
